Mailing Lists

We do most of our discussion and work on the Apache CloudStack mailing lists. Specifically, developer discussions happen on the cloudstack-dev mailing list. If you’re looking for user support, the cloudstack-users list is the best place to go. (You may be tempted to send mails to both lists looking for help. Avoid that temptation. It’s much better etiquette to direct emails to one list only, and to use the appropriate lists.) For guidelines on participating on the mailing list, see Mailing List Guidelines.

Please note that all of the lists are high-volume.

- To join the cloudstack-dev mailing list send an email to dev-subscribe@cloudstack.apache.org. The archives can be found on mail-archives.apache.org.
- To join the cloudstack-users mailing list send an email to users-subscribe@cloudstack.apache.org. The archives can be found on mail-archives.apache.org.
- To join the cloudstack-commits mailing list send an email to commits-subscribe@cloudstack.apache.org. The archives can be found on mail-archives.apache.org.
- To join the cloudstack-marketing mailing list send an email to marketing-subscribe@cloudstack.apache.org. The archives can be found on mail-archives.apache.org.

Before posing questions to the mailing lists ensure that you have looked through the archives. A very searchable archive of all the cloudstack mailing lists is available at markmail.

Marketing and Promoting CloudStack

Spread the word on how awesome CloudStack is. Below are the proposed open plans to gain visibility. By promoting CloudStack you can help to show the world that there is a “real”, stable, user friendly, easy to use, feature-full production ready cloud platform.
