

Why is the application logging a warning that the Compound Root cannot find a particular Object with a particular property

Sometimes, there are elements used on an input form that the application does not need to capture. For example, buttons create input values, but you might be attaching Actions to the buttons, rather than utilizing the button press as input.

When `devMode` is on, the framework reports when there is an attribute in the request that is not being harvested by an Action property. (In case you just forgot to create the property.)

- To eliminate the warning message, edit or create the `struts.properties` file and set `devMode` to `false` (off).

struts.properties

struts.devMode = false
