

March 2014

Apache Lucene.Net is a port of the Lucene search engine library, written in C# and targeted at .NET runtime users.

== Summary ==

Activity has picked up for the port of 4.3.0, the team is finishing up testing and some contrib packages for additional functionality. It looks like we should be approaching a release soon.

== Releases ==

Working toward 4.3.0

== Statistics ==

Nuget package downloads:

Lucene.Net 3.0.3: 53626

Lucene.Net Contrib 3.0.3: 16349

Lucene.Net Contrib Spatial: 2205

Lucene.Net Contrib Spatial.NTS: 611

Edit Update provided to the board 3/26/2014:

I will include this in reports going forward, but a quick update:

- The overall size and health of the community is difficult to quantify.

Questions come in probably once or so a week to the developers mailing list requesting help or issues.

Stackoverflow continues to have a health number of questions popping up tagged with lucene.net.

We have a healthy, but small, group of committers and PMC members trying to get the 4 release out the door. We could always use a bit more help here.

We could do for better help documentation, better samples, etc, something to strive for.

Overall, In my opinion, we are doing fine as a community.

- Our last PMC member was added late 2013 (I will dig up the date for the report). We have not added any committers or PMC members since